Members and guests of the Department of Internal Medicine gathered at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts on Saturday, November 11, to celebrate excellence in medical teaching. In the past four years, faculty members have won 65 national, regional, or local awards and prizes for teaching. Michael B. Edmond, M.D., MPH, Associate Director for Education and Director of the Housestaff Education Program, received the Department’s Five Year Award for Excellence. He has led the transition from a good to a superior program in educating residents in Internal Medicine. Six other young faculty members received Awards for Excellence in Teaching as judged by the Division Chairs: Laurie Lyndholm, M.D., Division of Hematology/Oncology; Richard Sterling, M.D., Division of Gastroenterology and Hepatology; Rita Willett, M.D., Division of General Medicine and Primary Care; Steve Freer, M.D., Division of General Medicine and Primary Care; James Levy, M.D., Division of Endocrinology and Metabolism; and Sara Monroe, M.D., Division of Infectious Diseases.
Dear Colleagues:

By several metrics, we in the Department of Internal Medicine have a top 25 Housestaff Program:

- Our RCC Review gave us a five-year period before the next visit. This maximum period is reserved for the top 20% or less of U.S. programs.
- We have 48 different medical schools represented in the program.
- Over 50% of applicants to any U.S. medical residency program apply to our Department.
- The high (over 90%) Board pass rate and high (76% percentile) USMLE-1 scores.

It needs to be stated that almost 30% of admissions to MCVH are managed by members of the Department of Internal Medicine. Despite an increase in admissions and an increase in patient days, our Department has been able to maintain the outstanding skills and the culture of the caring of these young physicians. MCVH is obviously a major beneficiary.

(continued on next page)

The Contribution of an Excellent Housestaff to the Institution

By several metrics, we in the Department of Internal Medicine have a top 25 Housestaff Program:

- Our RCC Review gave us a five-year period before the next visit. This maximum period is reserved for the top 20% or less of U.S. programs.
- We have 48 different medical schools represented in the program.
- Over 50% of applicants to any U.S. medical residency program apply to our Department.
- The high (over 90%) Board pass rate and high (76% percentile) USMLE-1 scores.

It needs to be stated that almost 30% of admissions to MCVH are managed by members of the Department of Internal Medicine. Despite an increase in admissions and an increase in patient days, our Department has been able to maintain the outstanding skills and the culture of the caring of these young physicians. MCVH is obviously a major beneficiary.

(continued on next page)
Members and guests of the Department of Internal Medicine gathered at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts on Saturday, November 11, to celebrate excellence in medical teaching. In the past four years, faculty members have won 65 national, regional, or local awards and prizes for teaching. Michael B. Edmond, M.D., MPH, Associate Director for Education and Director of the Housestaff Education Program, received the Department’s Five Year Award for Excellence. He has led the transition from a good to a superior program in educating residents in Internal Medicine. Six other young faculty members received Awards for Excellence in Teaching as judged by the Division Chairs: Laurie Lockholm, M.D., Division of Hematology/Oncology; Richard Sterling, M.D., Division of Gastroenterology and Hepatology; Rita Willett, M.D., Division of General Medicine and Primary Care; Steve Freer, M.D., Division of General Medicine and Primary Care; James Levy, M.D., Division of Endocrinology and Metabolism; and Sara Monroe, M.D., Division of Infectious Diseases.

(continued on page two)